

Please do not approve cell phone use in airborne planes! There is already too much noise pollution. Cell phone users (myself included) have a tendency to speak at amplified volume and disturb other travelers who wish to work, sleep or just have some peace in flight. It is noticeable and quite welcome when the flight crew announce that cell phones must be turned off for take off. I can't imagine how annoying it would be to have to listen to incessant cell conversations in a captive atmosphere. We can live without them for a few hours, don't you think?!
